There is nothing a man of strong will cannot achieve. A man of strong will is always successful while one who is weak in will has to face many failures. Those who have a wavering mind are often Cowed down by dangers. "Nothing venture, Nothing have" may be an excellent rule of conduct, but "no strong will, no Success" is the greatest principle of life. All difficulties melt away before a heroic mind. Very often we attribute our failure to chance, fate of stars. We blame our hick, but rarely, do we examine our own minds the weakness of which is really responsible for our failures chance and accident do play a part, rather an important part in our lives, but they fade away before a determined will. Hanky states a fact which is difficult to challenge. "Man is the master of his fate and the captain of his soul".

The great advantage of early rising is that one can start one's work long before others. The early riser has done a large amount of hard work before other men have got out of bed. In the early morning the mind is fresh and so sounds or noises disturb our attention. The work done at that time is generally well done Also one finds time to take some exercise in the fresh morning air. Exercise supplies him with a good deal of energy that enables him to work hard until the evening. By beginning so early, he knows that he has plenty of time to do his work thoroughly. He has not to hurry over any part of his work. He gets to sleep long before midnight. At that time sleep is most refreshing. After a sound night's rest he rises car next morning in good health for the labour of new day

- What advantages does an early riser have over others?
- Why should one take exercise in the morning and begin one's work so early?
- What are the uses of going to sleep long before midnight?
- What does exercise supply the early-riser with?
- Suggest a suitable title for the passage.
